

Good But Not Religious (GBNR)

JANUARY 2019 - A monthly update on Keith Martin's work as a nonreligious chaplain and educator at U. Waterloo, U. Guelph and online

ONLINE

www.GoodButNotReligious.ca has one addition:

“Religion for Atheists” by Alain de Botton. A link to a talk by philosopher and author Alain de Botton on “what nonreligious people can steal from religion,” given at the Sydney Opera House in 2012.

U. of WATERLOO, U. OF GUELPH

Other highlights from the Fall (not included in GBNR Updates for September through December):

Multi-Faith Resource Team orientation week event at U. of Guelph

Keith talking to a student (Photo by Andrew Hyde)

A student who visited Keith in his office at U. of Guelph wrote this after her visit:

“Thank you so much for your time yesterday. I really appreciate it. I’ll follow up on all those resources you shared with me. Hopefully we can continue the conversation in the new year.”

A student at U. of Waterloo dropped by for a copy of Seismic Shift: The novel (a reworking of Keith’s book Seismic Shift: From God to Goodness) and 2 weeks later wrote, “I am a UW student that recently met you and picked up a copy of your book. I just wanted to let you know that I enjoyed reading it. Many of the ideas that you explained so well in the book align with some of my own thoughts that I have not taken the time to develop clearly in words, so reading the book helped to establish some clarity. It is reassuring to know that people such as yourself share some of my perspectives. I will try to find a time to stop by and discuss the book with you in the New Year.”

For more information and photos of Keith’s work on campus, see www.facebook.com/SBNRWaterloo and www.facebook.com/SBNRGuelph.

Good But Not Religious (GBNR)

Good But Not Religious (Keith Martin) is creating resources for being and doing good

Overview Posts Community

BECOME A PATRON

In September Keith launched a fundraising page at patreon.com/goodbutnotreligious, a membership platform for artists and creators. If you see value in what he is doing and creating, consider becoming a patron and supporting him—even at $1/month. Your support, no matter how small, will encourage others to become patrons, enabling him to continue this work.

www.GoodButNotReligious.ca
Resources for Being and Doing Good