

Good But Not Religious (GBNR)

MARCH 2019 - A monthly update on Keith Martin's work as a nonreligious chaplain and educator at U. Waterloo, U. Guelph and online

ONLINE

www.GoodButNotReligious.ca has one addition:

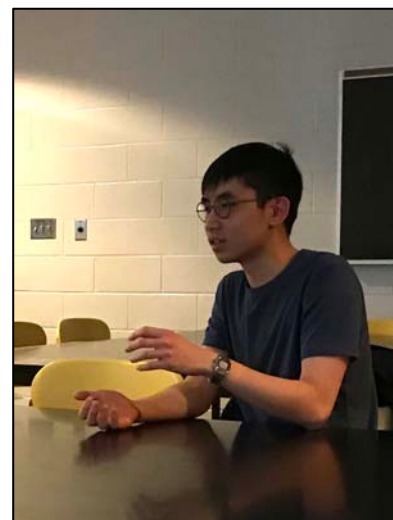

The Coddling of the American Mind excerpts: Excerpts from the 2018 book by Greg Lukianoff and Jonathan Haidt, follow-up to their 2015 article in The Atlantic. The article and the book relate to “being and doing good” by pointing out untruths that are not good and that contribute to the tribalism that is rampant on North American campuses and in society.

U. of WATERLOO, U. OF GUELPH

Highlights of Keith's campus work in February were A Taste of Oasis at both U. of Guelph and U. of Waterloo with a TED-like talk via YouTube called “Alain de Botton: On Love” (Moving beyond romantic love), given at the Sydney Opera House, and the ‘Community Moment’ by Olaitan Ogunnote at UG and Benjamin Ang at UW.

Because of Reading Week and weather closures, Keith met with 8 students, staff and alumni during drop-in hours in February.

Another highlight was giving the invocation at one of three U. of Guelph Convocations on February 19.

For more information and photos of Keith's work on campus see www.facebook.com/SBNRWaterloo and www.facebook.com/SBNRGuelph.

In September Keith launched a fundraising page at patreon.com/goodbutnotreligious, a membership platform for artists and creators. If you see value in what he is doing and creating, consider becoming a patron and supporting him—even at $1/month. Your support, no matter how small, will encourage others to become patrons, enabling him to continue this work.

www.GoodButNotReligious.ca
Resources for Being and Doing Good