

Good But Not Religious (GBNR)

OCTOBER 2018 - A monthly update on Keith Martin's work as a nonreligious chaplain and educator at U. Waterloo, U. Guelph and online

ONLINE

www.GoodButNotReligious.ca has a few additions:

1. Seismic Shift: The novel

A pdf copy of the final draft of Keith's novel is available online, and the paperback version has now been printed! You can order the paperback for $10 plus $5 postage from SeismicShift.ca, P.O. Box 188, Wiarton, ON N0H 2T0. Email info@seismicshift.ca or call 519-534-9188.

2. Psychology and The Good Life

An introduction to a Yale University course by psychology professor Laurie Santos on "Psychology and the Good Life," given at the Aspen Ideas Festival. Although Santos often equates the Good Life and well being with happiness, she does occasionally refer to meaning and meaningfulness, which some people would say is even more important than happiness.

www.facebook.com/KeithMartinGBNR

Please visit and 'like' Keith's new facebook page for his work on campus and online.

U. of WATERLOO, U. OF GUELPH

Highlights of Keith's campus work in September were the first A Taste of Oasis on each campus, featuring a YouTube debate between Christopher Hitchens and Rabbi David Wolpe on "Is Religion Good for the World?" Keith met with at least 13 students, faculty and alumni during drop-in hours, and several more on his display table days. Keith also had a display at the World Religions Conference at U. of Waterloo Sept. 16. For more information and photos of his campus work, see www.facebook.com/SBNRWaterloo and www.facebook.com/SBNRGuelph.

Keith has launched a fundraising page at patreon.com/goodbutnotreligious, a membership platform for artists and creators. If you see value in what he is doing and creating, please consider becoming a patron and supporting him—even at $1/month. Your support, no matter how small, will encourage others to become patrons!

www.GoodButNotReligious.ca
Resources for Being and Doing Good